Short-term Outlook

The Bottom Line

Similar to last night, seasonal evidence is bullish, but the market is at new highs and overbought. This is leaving the Aggregator neutral and me sidelined.

The Evidence

Another rally day and more new highs for the market. The SPX rose 0.7%, the NASDAQ gained 0.9%, and Russell 2000 rallied 0.7%. Breadth was negative as the NYSE Up Issues % was 68.3% and the Up Volume % came in at 68.1%. NYSE volume rose some from Friday's level.

The move up did not trigger anything compelling in the Quantifinder, and I did not uncover anything else that seemed to provide a short-term edge. Overbought rallies will sometimes provide scant evidence. And that is what we are seeing now. Which is fine. Overbought at new highs can be a difficult place to try and get long, and it can also be dangerous to try and short a strong rally. So rather than data mining in hopes of uncovering some marginal edge, I'll just keep the commentary short and go without adding anything new tonight.

I have updated the Aggregator chart below.

Without any new studies being added tonight, the green Aggregator Line remained above zero. Positive readings mean net expectations are for upside over the next few days. Meanwhile the black Differential Line held below 0. The negative Differential Line reading means SPX is overbought versus recent expectations. So expectations are positive but SPX is overbought. This is considered a neutral configuration. Neutral configurations are visible on the chart whenever both lines close on opposite sides of zero. Therefore, the Aggregator signal stayed flat at the close.

Based on the current list of active studies, expectations are slated to remain bullish on Tuesday. Of course this could change if compelling new bearish evidence emerges. Meanwhile, the Differential Pivot will be 3185.87 on Tuesday. That is 0.2% below Monday's close. Therefore, SPX will need to close down 0.2% or more on Tuesday in order to flip from overbought to oversold vs recent expectations.

The outlook is much the same as last night. The Aggregator is neutral with seasonality strong but the SPX already overbought. I'm neutral as well. With a bullish intermediate-term outlook, a strong ongoing SOMA expansion, and positive seasonality for the next few weeks the chances of me looking for short index trades is about 0. I will be alert to pullbacks accompanied by bullish studies to take possible long trades. We don't have one now, so I'll wait.

Intermediate-term Outlook (2 weeks – 2 months) – updated 12/16 – bullish

The intermediate-term outlook was last updated in the 12/16/19 Letter. It can be found in the most recent weekly letter on the website.
